What to look for in a Cut Make Trim Factory When looking for a factory to cut make and trim garments (CMT) you need to stick to the CMT's core specialty. Taking this opportunity to familiarize yourself with the factory set up will give you an idea of how many lines they are running, what machines they have, and what capacity do they have? At the same time you will get a feel for weather the factory staffs is happy or not, are there adequate facilities like toilets and a canteen. All this makes a difference, firstly that we don't want to support sweat shops and happy people produce happy garments. Look at how the material, trims, cut work and patterns are stored. If the factory is a mess it is very likely that you work will be treated in the same way. If they say they can do stretch, check out their machines, where are the safety stitches, or 4 thread over lockers. Do they have cover seam machine and can they adjust their overlocker to do a lettuce leafing finish. Ask to see what needles they are using. We all at some time have bought or known the frustration of having tiny laddering holes appear on seam lines on a knit garment because ball point needles were not used. Romis Fashion provide very high quality CMT services up to the 21st century standard of "Haute Couture". Using our services is to sign for a successful fashion business for your.
